The Whitney Laboratory for Marine Bioscience is a marine research institute of the University of Florida located in St. Augustine, Florida.

We study and learn about marine animals like these, we educate and train college students to be future scientists, and have STEM education programs for students in elementary school to high school.

We also have a Sea Turtle Hospital to care for sick or injured turtles and grow oysters, clams and different kinds of fish to put into waterways in Florida to help our environment.